

Mystical Angel Helps Man Rebuild His Life in Uplifting New Novel, "The Color of Dreams"

Tacoma, WA — Just as his life begins to fall apart, Ben Davidson finds unexpected hope in the form of a glowing, mystical angel in The Color of Dreams, the stirring new novel by Michael Zajackowski, releasing May 1, 2025. Set against the richly atmospheric backdrop of the late 1980s Pacific Northwest, this inspirational work of metaphysical fiction follows one man's path to rediscovering his purpose, reigniting his family's love, and rebuilding a long-lost dream.

Ben's story begins in crisis: he's been laid off, his family is drifting away, and the woodworking dream he once shared with his father is crumbling. But when a mysterious, luminous angel appears, she offers Ben six life-changing spiritual truths—each one a step toward healing, faith, and transformation. From learning to “imagine better than the best you know” to understanding how thoughts shape reality, Ben must overcome fear, self-doubt, and past failures to rewrite his future.

Booklife hails the novel as an Editor's Pick, saying, “Readers of inspirational fiction will enjoy this story of a man, an angel, and the work it takes to build happiness and fulfillment.” Literary Titan praises its “poignant narrative of second chances, self-discovery, and the rekindling of lost ambitions,” while Midwest Book Review says that “Libraries... will find it easy to recommend to readers looking for uplifting, inspirational tales of transformation.”

Blending soulful insights, emotionally resonant storytelling, and a touch of magical realism, The Color of Dreams speaks to anyone who's ever felt stuck, lost, or afraid to leap. It's a gentle yet powerful reminder that it's never too late to believe again—and to act on what truly matters.

With wide acclaim from authors, literary reviewers, and inspirational thought leaders, this novel is being celebrated as a must-read for dreamers, creatives, and seekers of all kinds.
